KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Steve Adami, MPA
Salvation Army

After spending more than two decades in and out of incarceration, Steve Adami transformed his life from one shaped by addiction and the criminal justice system to one dedicated to recovery, reentry, and creating opportunities for others. Following his release from prison in 2010, Adami earned a master’s degree in Public Administration and went on to lead reentry initiatives for the San Francisco Adult Probation Department, overseeing millions of dollars in recovery and reentry services.

Now Executive Director of The Way Out, a recovery-focused homeless initiative of The Salvation Army, Adami draws on both lived experience and professional leadership to help those impacted by addiction and incarceration rebuild their lives. In 2024, his remarkable journey came full circle when he received a pardon from Governor Gavin Newsom.

Lawyers sell every day: winning new clients, persuading clients to embrace our strategies, and recruiting and retaining great talent to work alongside us. However, the best selling doesn't feel like selling. And, it builds genuine buy-in, loyalty and mutual value. In this interactive session, you'll develop a mindset that creates buy-in and learn five practical mechanics that make selling feel like an act of service. You'll also hear from two Association leaders on how they build buy-in with clients and colleagues.

What Your Opposing Counsel Wishes You Knew

Grand Ballroom

(MCLE – 1.0 hours General credit)

Every litigator has a story about opposing counsel who made a case harder, longer, and more expensive than it needed to be. Fewer have stopped to ask what the other side says about them. This roundtable brings the plaintiff and defense bars into the same room for an open conversation about how we treat each other – and what it costs our clients, and ourselves, when we get it wrong. With a plaintiffs' attorneys at the table to offer the view from the other side of the caption, the discussion will examine the habits, assumptions, and incentives that drive unnecessary conflict, and the practices that experienced litigators on both sides rely on to keep cases moving. Topics will include:
